It has been a year since the implementation of changes to the rules and procedures of civil litigation in Hong Kong in the shake-up known as Civil Justice Reform. But what has CJR meant in practice? Has the way in which litigation is conducted really changed? By analysing both recent case law and developments, and the trends that have emerged over the last year, this seminar will examine the impact of CJR in Hong Kong, and will offer our insights into what litigants can expect from the courts in the future.

1 CPD point is granted for this seminar.
